The school of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences has as its purpose to provide a good quality education, both in the programs offered by the School, as well as in basic skills training courses and in Socio-humanistic training, so that our students develop critical-analytical, expression and communication skills, as well as their social and civic commitment. The School of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences is composed of four academic programs of professional formation: Psychology, Architecture, Social Communication and Journalism, and Design. Likewise, the School structures and administers three academic areas: Language, Socio-Humanistic Training and Philosophy, to contribute in the integral formation of the students of Universidad de Ibagué.

The Psychology Program of Universidad de Ibagué started in 1995, received accreditation of high quality in 2012 and renewal in 2017. It has 580 students; a team of 13 full-time professors and 11 adjunct professors, all with postgraduate training in different disciplinary areas and/or professionals of psychology, who are part of two research groups from the university and recognized by Colciencias: The Education, Health and Society Research Group -GESS and the Studies in Education Research Group -GESE. The program has the best equipped laboratory and bank of tests in psychology in the department of Tolima, and a Center of Psychological Care which works as IPS, since 2007.
